e. [redacted] However most of the soldiers, at one time or another, were sent to different schools in Austria.

25X1

f. One man of the 344th How. Arty. Regt. was court-martialed in August 1952 and sentenced to 1½ year's hard labor for being AWOL, drunkenness, and losing his uniform. He was returned to the USSR.

4. The following illnesses and injuries warranted return to the USSR: tuberculosis; stomach, heart and venereal diseases; ulcers; blindness, and loss of an eye or limb.

5. [redacted] criticising the Army too much was sometimes sufficient reason for classifying a person as politically unreliable.

25X1

6. Anyman who had been court-martialed was sent back to the USSR. The following were sufficient reasons for courts-martial: excessive drunkenness, repeated fraternization with Austrian nationals, repeated disobedience, vehicle accidents which were the fault of the drivers, loose talk, and excessive criticism of the military.

25X1

7. [redacted]

8. [redacted] hospitalized troops were being sent back by regular passenger trains. Prisoners were returned in special trains under guard.

25X1

9. [redacted] replacements for all returnees arrived during regular rotation periods.

Leave System

10. Officers in Austria were entitled to 45 days of leave each year, including travel time. The 45 days had to be taken at one time, only to the USSR, and at the discretion of the commander. [redacted]

11. In Austria, no enlisted man was allowed to go on leave except in case of a death in his family. Then, he only received 10 days plus travel time. It took about three months to get such a leave. In the USSR, 10-day leaves were given for good marksmanship, political reliability, and excellent marks in political examinations, as well as informing on comrades, or any deed considered good by the individual's commander.
